THE WORLD OF FLOW'RS.

By Fanny E. Lacy.

GRACEFULLY.

Well I re-mem-ber how in childhood's day, Near to a fav'-rite plot of flow'rs I'd play- And how from wearying task I oft would creep- To watch each dawn-ing tint with anxious peep—

Whilst the pleas'd fan---cy of those art--less hours—

Call'd it a world— a lit---tle world of flow---ers-

Call'd it a world— a lit-tle world of flowers.

2d VERSE.

My Fai-ry king-dom! ne--ver sure were seen, Sub--jects more blooming, nor a hap-pier queen: And as I view'd ye smiling at my feet, All breathing forth your love in homage sweet; Light was the passing breeze in those gay hours, O'er our young heads, my

3d VERSE.

And though much like the world my lot to stray, Your greetings were but those of summer's day; Yet now when_e'er your art-less blush I view,... To Heav'n and sim-ple Na-ture e--ver true, Oft do I think how this wise world of ours, Might learn from thee my lit-tle world of flowers- Might learn from thee my little world of flowers.
